LOOK AROUND & BEYOND...

On the threshold of spring, we begin to notice a quiet awakening within; with the first pale green leaves unfolding out of the buds. Sometimes simply noticing the change of seasons is enough to facilitate an inner change, which is hard even when it is positive. As hopeful and optimistic as spring season is, there is always an element of discomfort in the world of transitions. New beginnings often spring out of painful endings.

We have witnessed something similar in the recent Legislative Assembly Election held in the North Eastern States of Tripura, Nagaland and Meghalaya wherein attention of many in the country was drawn to these states with great suspense and concern. We are in the new phase of our journey socio-politically. What awaits us is yet a farfetched dream and wish. But we have a strong faith that God who writes straight in the crooked lines will bring out the best even in such circumstances.

The month of March also brought much anxieties, fears and uncertainties to students, young people and parents as various public exams are being conducted. In spite of much preparation most of the students feel unprepared for the final go. Struggles within them continue till the results are declared and beyond. Many young people live in complete frustration and discouragement due to failures and at the lack of opportunities. At the same time, they have a strong conviction that there is much room for growth, to dream and to look at new possibilities without losing hope. Faced with such reality, it is a big challenge for us, educators to reconsider our commitment to them and to rethink our way of being present among them today, to help them achieve their goals, realize their dreams and live their hope. But are we ready to accept the challenge?

We watch TV/ on Social Media or read the daily paper, there are stories of abuse and neglect, of children dying of hunger and disease, threats of wars, religious persecution, and the list is endless. In such chaotic situation we may often ask ourselves: how can we have hope in times like these? Or what do we still have to hope for anything better? But it is in believing that there is something new, something more beyond our human expectations. No matter what the challenges, nothing is impossible with the power and grace of God. We are invited to walk through every changing scenario with confidence, trust and hope. Therefore to be alert, to look around and beyond is the need of the hour.

For us who believe, Easter is certainly a celebration of hope and new life. In Jesus' resurrection every human aspiration finds its answer. It is a hopeful time for everyone. Let this newness of life and enthusiasm spurs us on to be living witnesses and fulfillment of God's big dream for the world, thus bringing hope to all.

FMA-INSinfo wishes all its readers a Blessed Easter and may the Risen Christ fill you with the hope of new beginnings, love, joy and happiness.

I would also like to draw your attention to the great feast ahead of us in the FMA family namely the World feast of Gratitude, which will be celebrated on 26 April 2018 in Asunción (Paraguay) in the Province of St. Raphael Archangel. Let the slogan proposed for the feast, "With the young, let the chords of life vibrate, witnessing to the joy of following Christ" be for us a guiding principle in our mission among the young.

THIS IS THE FIELD WHERE YOU MUST WORK

(An extract from the talk of Mother General during the Triennial Evaluation for FMA PCI at Auxilium Dum Dum, Kolkata – India on 26 January 2018)

A Synod on the Young

Sr. Yvonne Reungoat fma

On 13 January 2017, Pope Francis himself, in a letter addressed to the young, announced the Synod that will be celebrated in October 2018 on the theme: “The Young, Faith, and Vocational Discernment”.

“Depart from your land and go to a land that I will show you” (Gen 12:1). The Pope tells the young, “These are the words of a Father who today invites us to go out to launch ourselves toward an unknown future but that is the bearer of secure realizations that He Himself will accompany you to meet”.

Go out, leave one reality to go toward a new land, toward a more just and fraternal society according to the desires that the young themselves nourish in their heart.

However, for those who have faith in Jesus, the verb to go out has another meaning. It means to leave everything to follow the Teacher there, where He leads us. Responding to the question in every person’s heart – “Where do you live?” – He invites us to enter into His house: “Come and See”.

This invitation is also addressed to the young today to whom Jesus turns His gaze full of goodness and love (cf. Letter 13/01/2017).

It is the task of the Church community to help the young to feel embraced by this gaze, provoked by the voice of Jesus, moved by the impulse to begin walking, not alone, but with the help of expert guides, able to accompany, guide, support, contagion, witness.

The goal of the journey is the joyful encounter with the God of life, with Jesus, who took on our fragility and suffering, our joys and our hopes, and brings our dreams of happiness to fulfillment (cf. ibid).

The Document in preparation for the Synod emphasizes the need to listen to the young. They present common characteristics on all five continents, along with many different aspects. What unites them is a context of “fluidity and uncertainty never before experienced” where few are privileged and many live in situations of vulnerability and insecurity. All of this has a major impact on their life choices.

Certainly, not all of the considerations of the Document are applicable to the contexts of the various Countries, this is why it is necessary to listen directly to the young, as the Document recommends.

In general, the Christian youth of India desire a Church that is closer to the people, more attentive to social problems, more authentic and coherent. They live in a context that is not against Christianity, but that has millennial religious traditions that must be respected. India is the cradle of religions such as: Hinduism, Buddhism, Jainism, and Sikhism, which are flanked by the Abrahamic religions. The traditional religions preach non-violence, tolerance, peace, harmony, reconciliation, even though there are fanatical groups in some areas that make co-existence more difficult.

The young live in a reality that is continually more 'hyper-connected' which tends to structure even their way of thinking, their concept of the world, and even interpersonal relationships.

They experience the provisory nature of every choice: "Today I choose this. Tomorrow, I will see." This makes a definitive choice of life more and more difficult. They are afraid of a 'yes forever'.

Vocational discernment in this context, is accompanied by a great capacity for closeness, orientation, witness. The preparatory Document explains discernment in these actions: "Recognize, interpret, choose".

Personal accompaniment must reach "favoring the relationship between the person and the Lord, collaborating to remove what impedes it".

The art of accompaniment is then summarized in these three verbs: "go out, see, call".

"Go out" means abandoning the "schemes" that pigeon hole people and make the joy of the Gospel less credible. It also means abandoning an anachronistic language; to see is "to be" with young people to "listen to their stories"; "calling" is awakening desire, moving people from what keeps them blocked, asking questions without pretending to offer ready-made answers.

An important emphasis in the Document is that "the whole Christian community must feel responsible for the task of educating the new generations". We need "adults worthy of faith, authoritative believers, with a clear human identity, a solid ecclesial belonging". The educational role played by families and other educational agencies is "irreplaceable".

My Experience in the field of Evangelization

Sr. Melina Kharbani

All through my religious life as a temporary professed Sister I was working in the school but there is something within me that urges me to go and proclaim. Obviously those experiences of being in the Sunday Oratory and visiting villages during holidays have inspired me to dedicate my life for evangelization. Therefore after my perpetual profession in 1991, I asked Mother Philomena Prabalanathan, the then Provincial to allow me to go for direct evangelization. Again I was sent to a school, in Little Flower Imphal; here I took to heart visiting the families of non-Christians, as we know the Catholic population was very insignificant at that time. On every Sunday, along with a teacher I visited the Sangaiprou village, which takes half an hour or so walk from the Convent and was inhabited by the Rongmei tribe of Manipur. Gradually, with continuous follow up in making known to them about Jesus and the Catholic faith they embraced the faith and received Baptism. In this way I found such joy in sharing my faith with others, which in turn strengthens my own. After the bifurcation of the Guwahati from Shillong Province I got a chance of being in the direct evangelization in Rangblang Parish for six years, in Nongstoin for two years and in Mawkyndeng for four years. During these twelve years of my experience in the field of direct evangelization I found that collaboration with others in order to reach to more people is an effective way of evangelization. Mingling with the Catholic Women's Association (Seng Longkmie), Salesian Cooperators, the Youth groups and teachers of the villages have helped me in the apostolate of teaching Catechism, family visits and organizing various activities. It is also one of the means where the laity is empowered and is able to dedicate their time and energy for Church activities making them as shared partners in the work of evangelization. Sharing the real life of the people; staying with them in their homes, going to their fields and meeting them at their work place have at times edified me in the way they take the events of life in faith and most of all their simplicity of life and joy of living gives me courage to sow the seed of the Word of God in them.

Some of the activities that we usually carry out are systematic family visits especially the sick and lapse Catholics, conducting Seminars, Retreats, Sunday Class, Oratory, and preparation for the various Sacraments namely Baptism, Confirmation, First Holy Communion, Confession and Matrimony. I also had the fortune of attending many Training Programs on Small Christian Communities in which I have come to understand better its goals. In whichever village I visited I encourage the faithful to form SCC groups wherein the new way of being Church by using the seven steps of reading the Word of God is encouraged. It also emphasized on to know, to love and to live the Word of God. At present in my mission at Mawkyndeng I am given the responsibility of being the Chairperson of the Catechetical Committee. Hence various Competitions involving all the villages in the Parish like Quiz on Catechism, Preaching, Singing from the Catholic Hymn Book (Ka Lynti Bneng) and Bible Skits. Another field of my interest is to promote vocations to the Association of the Salesian Cooperators. My special joy is that within these four years I have been able to guide and encourage forty-eight members who have taken their promise as full-fledged Salesian Cooperators. Another milestone in my mission was the great joy of being able to initiate eight Oratory centers at Mawkyndeng and other big villages of the Parish in collaboration with the Salesian Cooperators on 16 August 2014 marking the inauguration of the bi-centenary birth of Don Bosco. Hence from then on, once a year on 31 of January in honour of Don Bosco an Oratory Day is organized for the three Parishes of Mawkyndeng, Barato and Sahnsiang run by the Salesian Cooperators.

There have been varied experiences in these years but I would like to narrate just two very significant ones. In 2014 several times I have attempted to visit a family of Nida-emki Biam a new convert from Raliang village who was preparing for the Sacrament of Matrimony at that time but since her family belongs to the traditional religion I was not able to do so. The family was so staunch that no religious could enter the family. The girl on her marriage day was not allowed to come home and so all the needful was done in her God mother's house and she went to the Church for the Sacrament of matrimony and to tie the knot with Mr. Edmon Phawa from Mawpasi. The marriage scene turned into a tearful gathering on witnessing this marriage unprecedented in the Khasi culture that a girl has to go to the boy's house on the day of her wedding. It was beautiful on the other hand to see the faithful of Raliang village who contributed to making the day a memorable one by giving a tea party to all present and most importantly shouldered the responsibility of being family to her by taking care of all the necessities for the smooth running of the celebration. In another incident, which happened at Mooshrot village, there was a certain family who lost their child but was not happy with the way they were treated for the funeral of the same by the Presbyterian Church where they belonged. No prayer service was conducted; the child was just buried without any formal rites, which saddened the family to the core. This was due to their poverty they could not give the church contribution. Unhappy with all that happened they associated themselves to the Catholic faithful where I had the joy of instructing them to the faith and it was a joyful event on 24 December 2015 that the whole family became Catholic. Another striking thing that happened was that they managed to obtain permission from the Headman to exhume the body of the child from the Presbyterian cemetery and brought it to the Catholic cemetery.

Having shared so much, not all is smooth sailing but I do encounter some problems in making known Jesus and the Gospel values. These are accepted in the light of faith and always striving to overcome any inconveniences and problems with the strength that comes from prayer and love of God.

Finally I would like to encourage all our Sisters to take to heart the Catechism class in order to strengthen the faith of the children, help them taste the beauty of being a Catholic, to grow in grace and remain faithful to their Baptismal promises. Let us try our best to be God's messenger of goodness to the people we meet in our day-to-day life and He will surely bestow His blessings on us because it is His own work. I would conclude with the quotation from John 15:16: You did not choose me; it was I who chose you and sent you to go and bear much fruit, fruit that will last.

Well of Valponasca in Memory of the Jowai Pioneers

A befitting conclusion of the 140 years of the First Missionary Expedition of the Institute was marked on 7 December 2017 with the blessing and inauguration of the Well of Valponasca at St. Mary Mazzarello Convent Jowai. The well is dedicated to the Pioneers of Jowai community namely Sr. Innocenza Vallino, Sr. Clotilde Appiano and Sr. Cecilia Da Roit also a Pioneer in the Northeast India. The seed that they have sown and the sweat that they have toiled has made Jowai to what it is now, embracing many young people of the region to be formed in the Salesian style of life.

The day began with the celebration of the Holy Eucharist presided over by Rt. Rev. Victor Lyngdoh DD, Bishop of Jowai and concelebrated by Fr. Manbha Pakem from the Bishop's House. Soon after Mass, all gathered around the well which is situated below the hill overlooking the Jowai Shillong Road just like the well in Valponasca where Mother Mazzarello use to fetch water. The design of the well is the replica of the well of Mornese. Sr. Dakyrmen Sohklet guided a meaningful Prayer Service during which Rt. Rev. Victor Lyngdoh blessed the well in the presence of Sr. Rosina Susngi, Animator, the Sisters and girls of the community, some faithful of the Parish and the Chief Guest Shri Andrew Shullai, MDC. A symbolic sign of inauguration was done by the chief Guest in which he turned on the switch and he wished that all who uses the water from the well may enjoy health and prosperity. It is also noteworthy to mention that the MDC had also given some help towards the construction of the well. After the short ceremony, all joined in for breakfast. The well has got a significant story to unfold. It was on 29 March 2016 that the work started but for more than 11 months of work there seemed to produce no result, so the community turned to St. Joseph asking him to give them the gift for his feast and right enough on the vigil of the feast of St. Joseph on 18 March 2017 at 10.30 in the morning a streak of clear water oozed out from one side and another seeped from the opposite side. Thus the well is a miracle of St. Joseph who never turns down those who place their trust in his intercession.

New Year, New Beginning

After a long respite, the Boarding is once again bubbling with bright and happy faces of boarders who have come returned after their holidays. The new ones entered the Convent on 10 February 2018 and the old ones came back on 12 February.

The number of the girls this year is less compared to other years, but the

The Sisters also organized various games in which everyone took part wholeheartedly and enthusiastically. The day concluded with an evening programme in honour of Don Bosco performed by the Aspirants and Postulants.

10 ways youth can make an impact

Youth activism and engagement can bring about important social changes that are sometimes left behind. Here's a list of ideas of how youth can participate locally and globally:

1. Know your rights: You might not be able to vote yet, but all children and youth hold national and international rights. These rights are only of use to you if you are informed about them, so read up!
2. Learn about local issues: Is a roadblock affecting your commute to school? Are the new taxes affecting your family's livelihood? Whatever the case, learning the issue will help in creating solutions that will have an impact on you.
3. Speak out: Speaking your mind online (through social media), and/or offline (at local meetings and gatherings) helps you assert yourself and your interests. Also, you never know who might be listening. Think before posting. Social media has a long memory and things can never truly be deleted.
4. Network: There are many inspiring youth like you around the world. Reach out to them. Learn about their efforts and initiatives, they might also work for you!
5. Spread the word: If elections are taking place, spread the word! Talk to friends and family about registering to vote. If there are important issues that are going unaddressed, become the person who addresses them. You are part of a community, and have the power to educate and influence those around you.
6. Join online campaigns: Is there an issue you are concerned about? Global campaigns are always happening. Find one that corresponds to your issue, join in, and implement the campaign locally.
7. Host a youth summit: Learn and share your perspectives and views with peers as well as decision-makers. Schools and local organizations can be of great support to you in trying to create a forum for the exchange of ideas. Bring together different communities and understand what you have in common, as well as your differences in interests and perspectives.
8. Use your creativity: Photography, arts and crafts, dance, theatre, sports, street art. Almost anything can be turned into an activist project. What are you good at? Translate it into civic activism!
9. Join/create a youth organization: Local youth organizations are great places to expand your knowledge and become an active member of your society. If your community doesn't have an organization representing youth, create one. Be the trendsetter!
10. Be an inspiration: Believe in yourself, and follow your passion. Passionate youth will change the world.

We all care about something, why not stand up for it?

Tickets to Heaven

There once was a sick child named John. He had a rare and serious illness, and all the doctors confirmed that he would not live long, though they couldn't say exactly how long it would be. John spent long days in the hospital, saddened by not knowing what would happen, until one day a clown who was passing by saw how sad John was and came over to say: "How come you're standing there like that? Haven't they told you about the Heaven for sick children?" John shook his head, but continued listening intently. "Well, it's the best place you could ever imagine, much better than heaven for parents or anyone else. They say it's like that to compensate children for having being sick. But to enter it there is one condition." "What is it?" asked John, concerned. "You cannot die without having filled the bag." "The bag?" "Yes, yes. The bag. A large grey bag like this," said the clown as he pulled one out from under his jacket and gave it to John. "You were lucky I had one on me. You have to fill it with notes so you can buy your ticket." "Notes? It's no use then. I haven't any money." "No, not ordinary notes, my boy. Special notes: notes for good deeds, pieces of paper on which you write every good thing you do. At night an angel comes and checks all this paperwork, and exchanges the good ones for tickets to heaven." "Really?" "Of course! But be sure to hurry up and fill your bag. You've been sick a long time and we don't know if you have enough time left to fill the bag. This is a unique opportunity and you cannot die before completing it; that would be a terrible shame!" The clown was in a hurry, and when he left the room John was pensive, staring at the bag. What his new friend had told him seemed wonderful, and he had nothing to lose by trying. That same day, when John's mother arrived to see him, he gave her the best of smiles, and made an effort to be more cheerful than usual, since he knew this made her happy. Then, when he was alone, he wrote on a piece of paper: "Mum smiled today." And he put the piece of paper in the bag.

The next morning, as soon as he woke up, John ran to see the bag. And there it was! A real ticket to heaven! The ticket looked so magical and wonderful that it filled John with excitement, and he spent the rest of that day doing everything he knew to cheer up the doctors and nurses, and he was company to the children who felt most lonely. He even told jokes to his little brother and took some books to study a little. And for every one of those things he put a piece of paper in his bag.

And so it continued, every day John woke up with the excitement of counting his new tickets to heaven, and working on getting a lot more. He did as much as he could, because he realised it was no good just to accumulate tickets in the bag in any way he could: every night the angel arranged them in the tidiest way, taking up the least space. And John was forced to continue doing good works at top speed, with the hope of filling the bag before getting too sick ...

And although he spent many days on this, he never filled the bag. John had become the most beloved child at the hospital, and he had done so in the most cheerful and helpful way... and this ended up completely healing him. Nobody knew how it happened: some said that his joy and his attitude must have cured him, others were convinced that the hospital staff loved him so much that they spent extra hours to try to find a cure and provide the best care, and some told how a couple of elderly millionaires who John had cheered up a lot during their illness had paid for him to have expensive experimental treatment.

Hope can be a powerful force. Maybe there's no actual magic in it, but when you know what you hope for most and hold it like a light within you, you can make things happen, almost like magic.

- Laini Taylor

The fact is that all these were true because, as the clown had seen so many times, you only have to put a bit of heaven in your old grey bag each night to transform what seems like a dying existence into the very best days of your life, however long they should last.

Johnny the Lizard

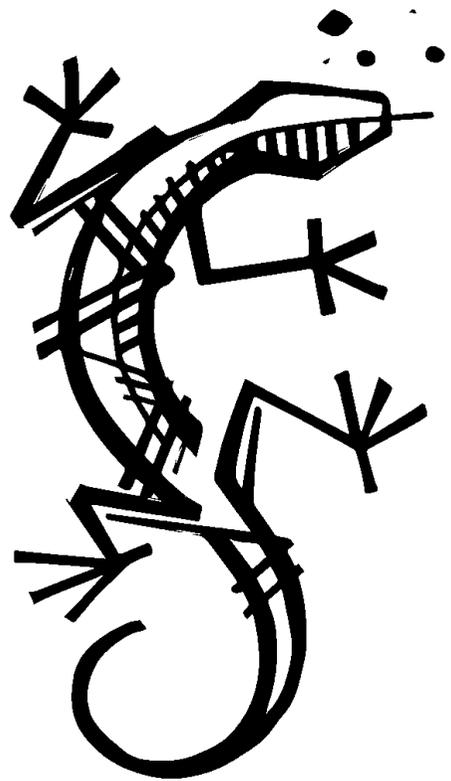

Johnny the Lizard lived between some rocks out in the country. Like all lizards he loved to quietly sunbathe, laid out on some flat stone. He felt so relaxed doing so, that more than once he had fallen asleep, and that's exactly what happened on the day he lost his tail: some kids caught him, and Johnny could only escape by losing his tail and running to hide.

Shocked and frightened, he listened to how the children laughed at seeing his tail continue moving about, even though it was no longer attached to his body. After a while they threw the tail away. When the children had gone, Johnny started looking everywhere for his tail, wanting to reattach it to its rightful place. However, the countryside was very big, and as much as he searched for it, Johnny could find no sign of his tail. He left everything else in his life, devoting himself to the search. He forgot about his home, his possessions, his friends. Days and months passed, and Johnny kept looking, asking everyone he met whether they had seen his tail.

One day, someone he asked surprisedly replied, "Why do you need two tails?"

Johnny turned and saw that after so much time spent searching he had grown a new tail. What's more, his new tail looked stronger and better than his old tail. Seeing this, he realised how silly it had been to dedicate so much time to a problem for which there was no solution. Johnny turned back and headed for home.

On his way home he found his old tail at the side of the way. It was dry and dusty, and looked really bad. However, Johnny, having spent so much time looking for it, was happy to find it, and he picked it up and resumed his journey. Soon he met a frog. The frog, surprised, asked Johnny: "Why are you carrying such a horrible old tail when you already have such a lovely tail of your own?" "Because I spent months looking for it," replied Johnny. "You really spent months looking for something so ugly and dirty?" said the frog. "Well," Johnny explained, "previously it wasn't as ugly as this..." "Hmm, but now it is, wouldn't you agree?... How strange you lizards are!" said the frog before jumping off into the distance.

The frog was right. Johnny still thought of his tail as though it was the same tail he used to have, but in reality it was now disgusting. Now Johnny understood, so he decided to drop his old tail there, leaving with it all his past worries. As he continued his journey all he took with him were thoughts of the future.
